

118TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

H. R. 7175

To protect individuals who face reprisals for defending human rights and democracy by enhancing the capacity of the United States Government to prevent, mitigate, and respond in such cases, and for other purposes.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

JANUARY 31, 2024

Mr. McGOVERN (for himself, Mr. RASKIN, Mrs. TORRES of California, Ms. OMAR, and Mr. CROW) introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and in addition to the Committee on the Judiciary, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned

A BILL

To protect individuals who face reprisals for defending human rights and democracy by enhancing the capacity of the United States Government to prevent, mitigate, and respond in such cases, and for other purposes.

1 *Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,*

3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4 This Act may be cited as the “Human Rights Defend-5 ers Protection Act of 2024”.

1 SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

2 Congress finds the following:

3 (1) Around the world, human rights defenders
4 form the backbone of democratic societies and move-
5 ments, advocating for human rights and political 6 freedoms, protecting the environment, fighting cor-
7 ruption, and supporting good governance, inde-
8 pendent media, and labor rights.

9 (2) Reprisals against human rights defenders
10 are on the rise as autocratic and illiberal regimes in-
11 creasingly target human rights defenders with fab-
12 ricated legal charges, threats and violence for exer-
13 cising civil, political, economic, social, and cultural 14 rights, often collaborating with transnational crimi-
15 nal organizations, paramilitary groups, private sector
16 actors, and others to carry out such reprisals.

17 (3) According to the United Nations High Com-
18 missioner for Human Rights, every year hundreds of 19 human rights defenders are murdered and thousands
20 more are subjected to torture, enforced disappear-
21 ance, sexual violence, hate crimes, unlawful or arbi-
22 trary detention, judicial harassment, unlawful or ar-
23 bitrary digital surveillance, and forced exile.

24 (4) The lack of accountability for attacks on 25 human rights defenders engenders further violence

1 and leaves human rights defenders hesitant or un-
2 able to continue their work out of fear of retaliation.

3 (5) Foreign governments are no longer oppres-
4 sing only individuals within the borders of their coun-
5 tries and are increasingly resorting to transnational 6 repression tactics, both digital and physical, to tar-
7 get human rights defenders outside of their coun-
8 tries of origin, often where such human rights de-
9 fenders are seeking asylum or temporary refuge.

10 (6) Human rights defenders facing the highest 11 levels of violence include individuals advocating for 12 land rights and environmental issues, Indigenous 13 communities, the freedoms of expression, assembly,
14 and association, minority communities, and 15 LGBTQI+, women's, youth, and religious rights.

16 (7) Environmental human rights defenders are 17 vulnerable to reprisals because such human rights
18 defenders pose challenges to financial interests and 19 often live in remote areas where government over-
20 sight is weak and powerful actors can use corrupt
21 practices and brute force to seize resources with im-
22 punity.

23 (8) Women human rights defenders often face
24 additional grave risks, including gender-based vio-
25 lence, reprisals against their children, use of digital

1 disinformation campaigns against them, and stigmatization from their families, workplaces, and communities.

4 (9) Many human rights defenders who have
5 been forced into exile desire to continue their advocacy from abroad, yet such human rights defenders 6 lack the legal protections and support they need to 7 continue such advocacy.

9 (10) The United States has a strong legacy of 10 supporting human rights defenders. Given the rising 11 number of human rights defenders at risk, the 12 United States should elevate and enhance such support,
13 especially at embassies, consulates, and foreign missions of the United States.

15 (11) The training and guidance for individuals
16 and organizations working with the United States
17 Government, including members of the Foreign 18 Service, on recognizing and responding to reprisals
19 against human rights defenders is insufficient, leading to ad hoc and inconsistent responses, while 20 human rights defenders who are at risk are frequently unaware of how to safely work with United 21 States officials abroad and the resources that are 22 available to human rights defenders.

1 (12) The United States has neither a coherent
2 strategy to strengthen protections for human rights
3 defenders, nor adequate measures to prevent and re-
4 spond to cases in which members of foreign security
5 forces, law enforcement, judicial institutions, crimi-
6 nal groups, or private companies contribute to at-7 tacks on human rights defenders. The United States
8 also lacks adequate consular resources and authori-
9 ties to facilitate temporary evacuation of human 10 rights defenders facing immediate lethal danger.

11 (13) While the United States possesses multiple 12 tools to hold perpetrators of reprisals accountable,
13 including sanctions, export controls, visa restrictions,
14 and diplomatic pressure, the United States deploys
15 such tools unevenly and without clear connections to 16 a broader strategic framework to strengthen protec-
17 tions for human rights defenders.

18 (14) Given the dramatic increase in attacks on 19 human rights defenders globally, the current ap-
20 proach by the United States Government to address
21 such attacks is insufficient to adequately respond to 22 the threats human rights defenders face, weakening
23 the ability of the United States to advance human 24 rights and democratic principles, respond to the cli-

1 mate crisis, counter corruption, and combat
2 transnational crime.
