3 to: driver education and testing related to school bus safety.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, most operator's licenses issued by the Department of Transportation must be renewed every eight years. In general, an applicant for renewal of an operator's license must pass an eyesight test and have his or her photograph taken. Under this bill, an applicant for renewal must also complete a verbal school bus safety examination that includes a test of the applicant's awareness of the hazards posed by other motor vehicles to school buses and passengers loading onto or unloading from school buses and of the statutes that require motorists to stop when a school bus is displaying flashing lights. The applicant's performance on the examination does not affect whether or not the applicant's license is renewed and, to the extent feasible, DOT must ensure that the examination does not extend the time necessary to complete the renewal procedure.

Currently, applicants for an initial operator's license must generally complete a knowledge test and driving skills test. The bill specifies that the knowledge test administered to these applicants must include material testing the applicant's knowledge of the hazards posed by other motor vehicles to school buses and passengers loading onto or unloading from school buses and of the provisions of the statutes that require motorists to stop when a school bus is displaying flashing lights.

Also under the bill, driver education courses offered by school districts, technical colleges, and licensed private driver schools must provide instruction in the the hazards posed by other motor vehicles to school buses and passengers loading onto or unloading from school buses and with the provisions of the statutes that require motorists to stop when a school bus is displaying flashing lights.
